

Top Women Techies

They are powerful. Manage large organizations. Globe trotters. Achievers. In the male dominated techdom we present 20 women who are impacting the technology business

DATAQUEST | A CyberMedia Publication

www.dqindia.com

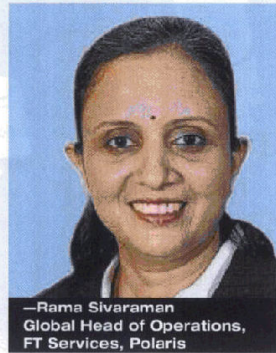

August 15, 2014 | 127

Copyright of the article is with the publication

Rama Sivaraman

A key member of Polaris' leadership team in India, Rama Sivaraman is an industry veteran having rich experience spanning software development, project management, business process consulting and implementation, people and performance management across the world. She is the Global Head of Operations, FT Services, Polaris India.

In her current role, she manages various functions such as quality, HR, finance, training, resource man-

—Rama Sivaraman
Global Head of Operations,
FT Services, Polaris

agement, operations, compliance and governance across the services business. Her key focus is on driving operational efficiency through a 'high performance workplace'.

Sivaraman holds a BE degree in Electronics and an MBA degree from College of Engineering, Anna University. A Certified Function Point Specialist and a Certified Quality Analyst, Sivaraman has provided process consulting services to several global organizations and spoken at several forums like Nasscom meet at Chennai, Chennai SPIN, and Woman in IT conference of CSI, and many other similar key conferences.

She has presented several papers at the prestigious Global SEPG conferences organized by the Software Engineering Institute, Carnegie Mellon University. She is also a Convener of WG10 ISO India Mirror Committee (IMC) and represents India at the international meetings.